WELCOME GREETINGS

EUROPEAN ATHLETICS PRESIDENT

Since the launch of the European Athletics Team Championships in Leiria in 2009, the event has quickly established itself as the premier team event on the international athletics calendar.

European Athletics is delighted to be back in Greece for the 2015 European Athletics Team Championships First League in Heraklion.

Staging an event is always an organisational challenge and I extend my thanks to the Heraklion 2015 Local Organising Committee, its staff and volunteers who, with the assistance of European Athletics, continue to work hard to make the event a success.

I also wish to pay tribute to the invaluable support of the national sponsors and suppliers supporting the event.

Located on the beautiful island of Crete, the stadium hosted part of the football tournament during the 2004 Athens Olympic Games and is currently the home ground of Greek Superleague football team Ergotelis.

Crete forms a significant part of the economy and cultural heritage of Greece. It was once the centre of the Minoan civilization, which is regarded as the earliest recorded civilization in Europe.

The First League will be held simultaneously with the European Athletics Team Championships Super League in Cheboksary, Russia, and Second League in Stara Zagora, Bulgaria, on 20-21 June 2015. The Third League takes place in Baku, Azerbaijan, from 21-22 June as part of the European Games.

More than 600 athletes from 12 countries will be competing for points at the Pankritio Stadium in 20 men's and 20 women's events.

With the emphasis placed on national team points instead of individual results, the unpredictability of a team performance coupled with the battle for national pride is sure to have spectators on the edge of their seats!

We look forward to strengthening our partnership through yet another highly successful event and I hope all spectators and athletes contribute to creating another fantastic milestone in the history of Greek athletics.

In June 2015 Heraklion will offer us feelings of emotion and joy by hosting one of the top athletic events, a unique celebration of peace, culture and friendship in a period where people around the world experience uncertainty and anxiety for the future.

From Crete -which created Europe's name- we will send a strong message that people can live in unity, regardless of their origin, color, gender and religion and can stand out by peaceful means, promoting ancient Greece's ideal of participation.

Crete is doing its best to ensure that prominent athletes, officials and spectators from Greece, the Netherlands, Czech Republic, Turkey, Romania, Estonia, Ireland, Portugal, Belgium, Lithuania, Switzerland and Latvia will enjoy Cretan hospitality, admire the island's exceptional beauty and taste its delicious dishes.

It is with great enthusiasm that the Region of Crete and the district of Heraklion welcomes an important event such as the European Athletics Team Championships.

We have managed to be entrusted with the organization of this beautiful athletic event, thanks to the optimal cooperation between European Athletics, the Hellenic Federation, our Region and the Municipality of Heraklion.

Our City has great potential and we are convinced that it can turn out to be a high quality sports tourism & training center for athletics Teams.

Apart from the above, we must focus on the fact that such cultural and athletics events acquire a special importance for our community, as they offer perfect opportunities to our people to overcome difficulties while at the same time become a glance of optimism in our rough everyday life.

This event is a benefit to all of us, in many aspects. Our Country is back to the International Athletics Stage, proving that we are capable of hosting major events and that Crete has the potential to become a perfect athletic venue.

A TOUR OF THE CITY

Heraklion is the largest urban centre in Crete with approximately 175,000 people, the capital of the region and the economic centre of the island. The town enjoys of a dynamic and imaginative combination of natural beauty climate, strategic position, cultural heritage and scientific background what has created an appropriate environment to support a particular mechanism with which to in add value to the broader entrepreneurial activity in the region and stimulate the local economy. Today Heraklion is the top choice for tourist destinations in the Mediterranean thanks to strategic geopolitical position connecting three continents and many different cultures, furthermore the city is also the commercial and scientific centre of the island.

If you begin a walk around Heraklion, starting at the fishing harbour close to the modern port, what will strike you first is the Venetian fortress at the harbour gate. The fortress was originally built by the Venetians and called Rocca al Mare, but is now known by its Turkish name, Koules. It has a mixed history; for centuries it was used as protection against invaders, as were the great city walls and ditches. These are among the longest city walls in Europe.

25th of August Street

It takes its name from a massacre of 'martyrs' which occurred in 1898. This involved the killing of many Cretans and, crucially, British in this area, by the Turks, finally forcing the 'Great Powers' (Britain, France and Russia) to recognize Crete's struggle. Old and modern buildings compete for space now on the street named to remember 25th August. Walking up the short hill, and passing the shops and tourist offices, we reach St. Titus' Cathedral, an impressive sight. Saint Titus, a fellow traveller of Saint Paul, preached the gospel in Crete during Roman rule and was martyred in Gortyn, where a 7th Century basilica stands in his memory. A little further and you discover the Venetian architecture of the Loggia which functioned as a club for the nobility to gather and relax. The Loggia is a wonderful example of Venetian building, unmistakable with its semi-circular arches, it was built in the 16th century and was located in the Piazza dei Signori (Square of the Administrative Authorities). The Loggia was awarded the Europa Nostra first prize in 1987 for the best renovated and preserved European monument of the year.

St. Mark's Basilica, almost next door, is now the Municipal Art Gallery and often host to art and crafts exhibitions, almost always open to visit. Built in 1239 in the Piazza delle Biade (Square of Blades), it was at one time the Cathedral of Crete. The Basilica belonged to the reigning Duke, eventually becoming his burial place.

Liondaria, or Lion Square

This is the heart of Heraklion where tourists and locals share the small space around the fountain, exchanging glances and perhaps a few words. Business and pleasure combine here, and it is the place to meet for whatever purpose or no purpose. To give some background, it might also be called the Morosini Fountain or, Liondaria in Greek or, more properly, Plateia Eleftheriou Venizelou, after Venizelos, Crete's greatest man of state. No need to be hungry here. The bougatsas, or vanilla cream pies, are great for breakfast, and there are plenty of omelette, crepe and souvlaki places around. Plateia Kornarou lies at the top of the market, with a lovely Venetian fountain of its own, the Bembo Fountain, probably the oldest, and it bears some very good decoration, although it has ceased to fount. The Bembo Fountain was built in 1588 by Venetian architect Zuanne Bembo. It is decorated with columns, Venetian family coats-of-arms and a headless male statue, brought here from Ierapetra. The Plateia itself is named after Vitsenzos Kornaros (1553 to approx.1614), composer of the epic poem Erotokritos, which is regularly performed around Crete, and still evokes pride in every Cretan heart.

A TOUR OF THE CITY

Agios Minas Cathedral

You will find plenty of life around the wide space in front of the cathedral, dedicated to the Patron Saint of Heraklion and one of Greece's largest churches, completed in a cruciform shape with twin towers. The church suffered damage in the battles for the city and needed thirty years to be rebuilt. In 1896 it was inaugurated with lavish celebrations. The square also contains a wonderful collection of religious icon paintings, housed inside the strong walls of the much older church of Agios Minas, and the Basilica of Agia Ekaterini and the site of a renowned school of Renaissance painters and writers in the 16th and 17th Centuries.

Plateia Eleftherias, or Freedom Square

The spacious Plateia Eleftherias is worth exploring, built in a crescent shape alongside the Archaeological Museum and close to Heraklion's municipal buildings and the main foreign Consulates. Apart from breathing space, it offers the shaded park of Georgiades, a fine place to rest the feet and watch the busiest intersection in Heraklion. On the seaward side of the square is the entrance to St. George's Gate, used from Venetian times as a passage between the city and its port, the entrance is down stone steps, leading to an atmospheric dome-roofed chamber and the lower exit.

Archaeological Museum

The world famous Heraklion Archaeological Museum was built between 1937 and 1940 on a site that had been occupied during the Venetian Period by an imposing Catholic monastery of St. Francis, which was destroyed by the earthquake of 1856. The Museum houses archaeological finds from all over Crete. Pride of place goes to the treasures of the earliest European civilization, the Minoan, which can here be admired in all its historical continuity.

Other Places of Interest

Historical Museum of Heraklion, on Sofokli Venizelou, facing the sea, is dedicated to bringing 2,000 years of history to life. The museum was founded in 1952 in a handsome turn of the 20th Century townhouse. It houses important examples of early Christian artifacts, stonework and decorative objects of Roman, Arab, Byzantine, Venetian and Turkish origin. .

The City Walls

Heraklion is surrounded by a formidable medieval wall, which was used to protect it from enemies. Owing to this, the city enjoyed the reputation as a well-fortified state in the Mediterranean basin. It stood up to a siege from the Turks for 21 years, but was finally seized in 1669 after its betrayal by a Greek-Venetian engineer who informed the invaders of the walls' weaknesses at east and west bastions.

Knossos

The centre of Minoan civilisation and capital of Minoan Crete lay 5km south of Heraklion.

Knossos flourished for approximately two thousand years. It had large palace buildings, extensive workshop installations and luxurious rock-cut cave and tholos tombs. As a major centre of trade and the economy, Knossos maintained ties with the majority of cities in the Eastern Mediterranean.

The Minoan palace is the main site of interest at Knossos, an important city in antiquity, which was inhabited continuously from the Neolithic period until the 5th c. AD. The palace was built on the Kephala hill and had easy access to the sea and the Cretan interior. According to tradition, it was the seat of the wise king Minos. It was a multi-storey building covering an area of 20.000 square meters.

THE HISTORY OF EATCH

The history of the European Athletics Team Championships is a young one. Heraklion public will witness the sixth edition of this rather young competition only since the inaugural event 2009 in Leiria/Portugal (Super League).

The league system of Super, First, Second and Third league includes promotion and relegation in between the leagues. And, this can be regarded as a milestone, the results of men and women in the 20 competitions each are combined. As in the Super League, in the First League twelve teams are competing, in the Second and Third League eight and 14 teams respectively. The European Athletics Team Championships are an annual event but not staged in the years of Olympic Summer Games.

The European Athletics Team Championships' predecessor was the European Cup, which was staged for the first time in 1965 in Stuttgart (men) and Kassel (women) and for the last time in Annecy/FRA in 2008 with its 29th edition. In its final format, the European Cup was also staged in different leagues, the top league named the Super League and contained eight male and eight female teams. The male and female teams were separate teams, which meant that the female team of one country could get relegated while their male counterpart would stay in the Super League as long as they had enough points. Below the Super League were the First and Second Leagues, which contained other European countries that did not qualify for the finals.

GREECE AND MAJOR COMPETITIONS

In 2004, the return of the modern Olympic games in Athens was a historic homecoming that attracted worldwide acclaim and received positive reviews from the world's press and the then IOC president, Mr. Jacques Rogge. In 1997, Greece had successfully organised the World Senior Athletics Championships in Olympic Stadium, while in 1982, the European Athletics Championships had taken place in the same venue - a successful follow-up to the 1969 European Athletics Championships in G. Karaiskakis Stadium. The 2006 World Cup and 2009 Grand Prix Final were the most recent athletics events that took place in Greece. Major indoor athletics events, such as the 1985 European Indoor Championships, have also been hosted by our country. In 2006 Thessaloniki hosted the first league of Bruno Zauli.
